Nedbank CIB Market Commentary | CIBMarketComm@Nedbank.co.za | +27 11 295 5430

- Chinese manufacturing PMI remained stable at 50.4, marginally worse than forecasts of 50.5. Output and employment were the only sectors which improved with the latter still in contraction. While new orders deteriorated, it remains in expansion while other sectors deteriorated and remained in contraction. An aggregate number above 50 for a second consecutive month implies that growth may remain muted but in line with guidance but that continued sluggish global growth will constrain any upside surprises.
- Japanese manufacturing PMI rose to 50.4 in September for a fourth consecutive month of improvement and the first expansion since February. Output rose to 50.8 from 50.2 index points. New orders also continued to improve. The trend supports an uptick in manufacturing although this will remain constrained by global demand. New policy moves by the BOJ to spur inflation will be watched closely.
- The UK manufacturing PMI surprised yet again by rising to 55.4 index points from 53.4 (upwardly revised) and beating consensus at 52.1. This was the highest headline number since 2014 and was on the back of new orders which rose to 56.8 from 54.6 index points. In the interim, the sector is likely benefitting from a much weaker sterling but continued access to markets. We are sceptical of this trend being sustained given the looming invocation of Article 50 and an official leaving of the EU which will likely harm trade volumes in the long term.
- Eurozone PMI ticked higher to 52.6 from 51.7 prior, in line with forecasts but remains in expansion for 22 consecutive months. New orders rose to 53.4 from 51.4 prior and higher than the 52.2 in July. The makeup of the Eurozone's performers has been interesting in that Germany has returned to the top of the list (54.3 pts) while Spain (52.3) and Italy (51.0) which collapsed from peaks early in 2016 appear to be bottoming and returning to growth. France remains in contraction at 49.7 and a drag on the headline performance.
- US ISM manufacturing bounced back into expansion at 51.5 index points in September after a contraction (49.4) in August, the first in 6 months. This was ahead of consensus expectations at 50.4 index points as 8 of the 11 sub-components improved. New orders were sharply higher at 55.1 from 49.1 and production was also higher at 52.8 from 49.6. The employment sub index improved to 49.5 from 49.0 but remains in contraction. August's data was among the worst date seen in many years and as such, a bounce is encouraging and takes the Q3 average to marginally below Q2 at 51.8 index points. This implies that the sector should contribute positively to Q3 headline GDP numbers but that the pace of growth remains sub-trend. The better data will raise expectations of a Fed hike and prove dollar supportive.
- SA's manufacturing PMI remained in contraction at 49.5 index points from 46.3 in August. This takes the average for Q3 49.4, implying a drag in the quarter relative to the Q2 performance. New sales orders remained in contraction but rose from 42.5 to 47.7. Business activity ticked into expansion at 51.4 from 44.8. Of the 5 main sub-components, only one decreased. Employment deteriorated to 48.7 from 50.6. Expected business conditions (6 months out) improved for a 3rd consecutive month but whether this catalyses further investment needs to be seen. The prices sub-index fell sharply as inflation expectations and a stronger rand helped this metric.

Global manufacturing conditions remain downbeat albeit marginally in expansion. Surprise upticks in UK PMI as well as some signs of a better backdrop in Europe remain tentative. However, global trade remains weak. Global monetary policy bias is still accommodative, in order to support growth and spur inflation, apart from the Fed that's considering a rate hike. The better US data will support rate hike expectations from the Fed and prove dollar supportive. The SARB's stagflation dilemma has been deferred as inflation pressures ease. The implication of slower growth on fiscal metrics remains a concern as we head into MTBPS this month as well as the ratings reviews at the end of the year.

SA

- SA vehicle sales for September fell by 14.3% y/y from a decline of 9.6% in August and 17.1% in July. This is the 10th month of consecutive decline. Exports were 6.5% lower. Sales of light commercial vehicles were 14.8% lower while sales of cars were 14.4% lower indicating that declines were across the board.

Synopsis: There is little direct bearing on policy from this print. However, of concern is the decline in exports which will correlate with our view of a slowing in trade balance data over the coming prints as the impact of a stronger rand during 2016 starts to be felt. Consumers also remain hard pressed and as such, vehicle sales from the retail sector also continue to face headwinds.

- The new week got under way with the rand trading in the mid 13.70's. These levels proved to be the highs on the day as the local unit encountered continued support for the majority of the session. This saw it trade to a best level of 13.5500 on the day and at those levels some dollar buying put a base on the move with the rand trading back to close around 13.6500.
- This morning at the time of writing the rand is currently trading at 13.6300, this despite the dollar finding support in the NY session last night against most of the currencies. EURZAR currently trading at 15.2650 and GBPZAR at 17.5110.
- International markets were once again somewhat lacklustre, little by way of fresh impetus to activate the markets. EURUSD held above the 1.1200 pivot and the aforementioned strength in the dollar was limited. This morning it is currently trading at 1.1198. Gold has continued to hold steady around the recent lows, currently trading at 1312.00
- Data releases scheduled for today, nothing locally, from Europe we have Eurozone PPI, from the U.S we have ISM New York and Lacker and Evan's from the FED scheduled to speak.
- While the local economy continues to falter, Minister Gordhan has expressed his confidence that the economy could expand by 1 percent in 2017. Local student protest action remains in the headlines and now potentially having dire consequences for higher education next year
- Possible trading range in the rand today 13.4800 to 13.7800

- Gold edged lower yesterday, and maintained the down-trend in Asia this morning, on the back of a rally in the dollar. Gold has been on a downtrend since July, and most recently, demand for gold ETF's have waned, while safe haven demand has also dwindled. Uncertainty surrounding global monetary policies however, are keeping the gold price from correcting sharply lower. On the back of expectations for a strong dollar, the gold price will likely continue on the gradual downtrend over the medium term.
- Brent crude broke above the key $50/bbl. mark yesterday, with a test of the level culminating into an extension higher. OPEC production changes have kept the oil price relatively elevated, even while non-OPEC supplies are likely to continue rising. However, the OPEC announcement will act as near-term support for the oil price, even if fundamentals have remained unchanged in the interim.

- Risk off in the NY hours as the USD catches a bid post-data yesterday. G10 rates are all softer as a result and oil higher.
- There were good offshore inflows yesterday, however, as EM started the quarter well, and the auction this morning will test any further EM appetite.
- We open within a point or two of where we closed and we think the range holds for now - 8.75/55 on R186s.

South Africa

- After a turbulent open, the Top 40 (-0.7%) settled in a gradual decline during a choppy trading session. Resources lost -0.2% as precious metals tanked despite a positive showing by diversified's. Insurers led financials to close down -0.6% and industrials were a mixed bag with gains in Remgro and Tiger Brands offset by losses in Medi Clinic and Naspers. Anglo rallied due to asset sales to the value of $1.7 billion and MTN tumbled after S&P 500 downgraded their group rating from BBB- to BB+ with a stable outlook amid continued uncertainty in Nigeria. The value traded was R17 billion and the rand was hovering around 13.66 to the US dollar at the close.

UK/Europe

- European markets recovered from earlier losses and traded in positive territory for the majority of the day but fluctuated in the last session and closed mixed. The FTSE led the region climbing +1.2% boosted by rising oil prices and a pledge by Theresa May to trigger Article 50 by March 2017. The Dax was closed for a public holiday and spared the region of negative Deutsche Bank headlines. Deutsche is rumoured to be in talks with the US department of justice for a reduced fine. The Cac inched higher by +0.12% supported by consumer staples and health care stocks. In London, Henderson Group soared +17% after they agreed to an all-stock merge with US Janus corp.

USA

- US markets couldn't maintain the upward momentum from last week and fluctuated in negative territory for the duration of the trading session. The Dow lost -0.4%, the Nasdaq retreated -0.2% and the S&P500 shed -0.3%. Traders seemed reluctant to take outright positions ahead of the jobs report due on Friday and there are also concerns about the UK's eagerness to trigger Article 50 sooner rather than later. The data was mixed and failed to give the market direction, the ISM manufacturing index topped economist estimates but construction spending disappointed.

Asia

- Asian markets shrugged the negative lead from Wall Street and are trading mostly in positive territory; the MSCI Asia Pacific is up +0.8%. The Japanese market is leading the region as the yen weakened and boosted the index heavy-weight exporters. After a negative open, the Australian market has turned positive led by energy and information technology stocks. The central bank has kept interest rates unchanged at record low of 1.5%; BHP Billiton and South 32 are up +0.3% and 0.04% respectively. China mainland is closed the entire week for a holiday while Tencent is currently down -0.2% in Hong Kong this morning.

Foreign flows

back to top

Nedbank CIB Market Commentary | CIBMarketComm@Nedbank.co.za | +27 11 295 5430

- Foreign outflows amounted to R13.5 billion last week, as non-residents sold R10.1 billion of local equities and R 3.4 billion of bonds. The dismal trend in foreign flows and the marginal outflow from bonds remain a concern going into the end of the year and seem to be reflective of the historical trend of underperformance in the final quarter.
- For September as a whole, R16.8 billion outflows were made up of R 15.6 billion equities and R1.2 billion bonds. What is worrying is that the annual outflow has almost doubled from just 2 weeks ago, when net outflows for the YTD were R16 billion. This now stands at R 29 billion as at last week. Risk aversion, local social tensions, a credit rating review, and a volatile currency have all hampered flows, and this may persist into Q4 as well.
- Foreign sentiment remains fickle and this will likely keep flows volatile. Global monetary policy will also dictate the course of flows into emerging markets. A Fed hike later in the year may slow flows into SA bond markets, even while inflows for the year to date are still positive at R67 billion.
