SNIPPETS

(Charts of the day)	US NFP lower, in line with ADP, surprise uplift from manufacturing; US trade deficit widens on lower exports, China still largest trade partner, policy risks of incoming administration; factory orders and durables spending still indicate weakness in investment
(Currencies)	Rand slides through non-committal session on Friday as NFP does little to move needle on majors
(Equities)	Top 40 closes stronger on Friday, US markets higher but Asia mostly flat this morning
(Economics)	German retail sales softer in November, factory orders weaken after prior surge; Eurozone confidence remains upbeat with widespread improvement, retail sales marginally softer, Chinese reserves marginally above $3trn

Nedbank CIB Market Commentary | CIBMarketComm@Nedbank.co.za | +27 11 295 5430

- US nonfarm payrolls printed at 156 000 from an upwardly revised 204 000. The miss relative to a consensus of 175 000 was not entirely unexpected following the weaker ADP number earlier in the week. A positive surprise remains the rise in manufacturing jobs from a decline of 7000 to +17 000. This is the first positive contribution from the sector since July 2016.
- Good producing jobs rose by 12 000 with services remaining the main engine with +132 000 jobs. Sub sectors posting job losses remain mining and construction which reversed gains from last month as well as a decline in temporary help services.
- The unemployment rate ticked up to 4.7% from 4.6%, in line with expectations while average hourly earnings rose by 2.9% y/y and 0.4% m/m. The upside surprise on earnings will need to be watched closely as a sustained gain is required in order to underpin a consumer led recovery. The average weekly earnings are now at $891.80, up 2.33% from last year with the difference between hourly gains and weekly indicating less hours worked per week. Low labour force participation at 62.7% remains a feature.
- The US trade deficit widened to $45.2 billion in November, from $42.4 billion previously, marginally better than forecasts of $45.4 billion. This is the widest in 9 months as exports contracted by 0.2% over the month, while imports rose 1.1%.
- China remains the largest trade partner of the US (total trade) at $527.58bn for the year to November, albeit declining by 4.3% y/y. Canada, Mexico, Japan and Germany round of the top 5 spots. South Africa ranks 39th with total trade at $10.36bn from $11.69bn prior (-11.4%).
- The US runs its largest deficit with China at -$319.28bn for the YTD followed by Japan at -$62.41bn. This goes a long way to explain President elect Trump's antagonism toward Chinese-US trade relations. We remain sceptical of a widespread disbanding of NAFTA or the TPP although there will likely be significant renegotiation. This uncertainty may serve to be enough to curtail trade activity and remains a risk to the optimistic growth outlook and feeds into our view of a flatter US hiking cycle than the Fed Dot Plot indicates. The stronger dollar will act as a headwind to export competitiveness. Significant policy risks to this metric over 2017.
- US factory orders contracted by 2.4% m/m in November, from 2.8% growth previously, worse than forecasts. Orders for capital goods and defence equipment contracted sharply, weighing on overall investment spending. Nondefense capital goods orders excluding aircraft grew by 0.9% m/m, from 0.2% in October. Key positive drivers were orders for electrical equipment, machinery and fabricated metals. Durable goods orders contracted by 4.5% m/m in November, from 5% growth previously, marginally better than expectations of -4.6%. Excluding transport, growth in orders was a marginal 0.6%. Negative drivers were transport and nondefense aircraft which declined sharply and weighing on the overall durable goods orders.

Our longer term view remains a strong dollar although short term momentum indicates the softening in the dollar index to persist a little longer given an easing in rate hike expectations relative to an overly optimistic '3 hikes in 2017 stance'. We see a possible 1 hike in Q3 2017 should growth dynamics persist. On the back of this, we see a stronger dollar into the end of 2017.

- The local session saw the rand start the day trading in the mid 13.60's. As it was NFP Friday, we saw very little actual trading take place ahead of the data announcement. Corporates remained quiet and liquidity remained thin. The Rand played between 13.6000 and 13.7000 for majority of the session. Post the release of the jobs data which missed expectations, the market was fairly unchanged and showed no conviction of any further interesting moves ahead of the weekend. The rand market closed the day at 13.6725. New York saw the rand trade marginally weaker between 13.6500 and 13.7600. This morning it opens at 13.7800.
- International markets followed a very indecisive day. Both Euro and Pound initially traded firmer on the day touching the highs of 1.0623 and 1.2430 on the back of the weaker US jobs data, but eventually both retraced to close the day near the lows of 1.0560 and 1.2310. This morning we open weaker at 1.0527 and 1.2226 respectively. Gold unmoved on the day closing a mere $1 firmer at $1176, this morning it opens at $1174. EURZAR opens at 14.5000 and GBPZAR opens at 16.8400.
- The rand remains very sensitive to economic data releases, and until we have clear indications of the health of the US economy and the possibilities of further interest rates hikes, mixed with political announcements locally, one still favours a firmer rand in the shorter term. On the data front we have EZ unemployment rate. Possible trading range: 13.6000-13.9000

- Brent crude oil range bound on Friday as the market begins to focus on the prospect of US shale drilling to offset Saudi production cuts. Remains elevated in near term. Watch inventory levels in short term
- Gold bullion slid on Friday on the back of a slightly stronger US dollar post NFP data. It has managed to sustain a move ahead of $1150 in the short term, countering bearish hedge fund sentiment.

South Africa

- The All Share index started the trading day in positive territory on Friday morning and continued to rally throughout the day ending around its session highs. It closed 1.47% higher with the property and life insurance sectors leading the upside advancing 1.27% and 1.06% respectively.
- Naspers was also amongst the top performers on the day advancing 4.90% making up 338points of the 741 index point move on the All Share index.
- Sirius Real Estate announced that it had notarised the sale of its Rupert Mayer Str. business park in Munich for €85million and has agreed to lease back and manage the asset for six years.
- Value traded at 5pm was around R12.5bn with the currency at R13.65 vs. the USD at the close.

UK/Europe

- European markets were marginal higher on Friday with the FSE100 and Dax gaining 0.20% and 0.12% respectively.
- German Retail sales data came in below expectations on a month-on-month basis down 1.8% however they beat year-on-year estimates, printing a figure of 3.2% versus 1.2% forecast by economists.
- The Euro Stoxx 50 was up 0.14% with the likes of LVMH and Deutsche Bank climbing 1.30% and 1.13% respectively.

USA

- The Dow Jones Industrial Average and S&P 500 continued to rally as the New Year bullish market sentiment gained further traction. They ended the trading day 0.32% and 0.35% higher respectively.
- US Non-farm payrolls came in below market expectations at 156k versus a 175k estimate, the previous months figure was revised higher to 204k. The unemployment rate edged marginally higher to 4.7% from the 4.6% seen the previous month.
- Factory Orders and Durable Goods Orders on the other hand came in broadly in line with expectations.

Asia

- Asian markets are flat this morning with the Hang Seng marginally up 0.04% while the Nikkei is closed for a public holiday.
- The likes of PetroChina Co Ltd have advanced 2.48% while the Industrial & Commercial Bank of China declined 0.85% on concerns that China's efforts to curb capital flight while good for domestic liquidity, market rates and bond yields may hinder net interest margin recovery at China's largest banks as rates drop.
- The Australian ASX is strong this morning up 0.93% as building approvals came in much better than expectations showing a 7% gain month-on-month and -4.8% (y/y).

Nedbank CIB Market Commentary | CIBMarketComm@Nedbank.co.za | +27 11 295 5430

Germany

- German retail sales fell during November at -1.8% from 2.5% prior (upwardly revised). This was marginally worse than consensus. There were declines in all major sectors over the month excluding food & tobacco which were flat. This is the worst monthly performance since 2013 while annual performance was flattered by base effects. It is positive to note that retail sales growth on an annual basis remains above the 5 year and 12 month average of 1.2%, currently at 3.2%.
- Factory orders declined by 2.5% in November from an upwardly revised +5.0% prior and only marginally below consensus of -2.4%. The large slump was due to surge during October led by capital goods. Capital goods orders fell from +7.3% m/m to -4.8% m/m. Manufacturing orders were also impacted by larger decline in domestic over foreign orders.

Synopsis: The weaker November data is counterbalanced by strong previous data and as such does not change a reasonably resilient picture for the German economy. Our view is that geopolitical risks in Europe remain the main flashpoint in the near term. Monetary policy will likely remain accommodative through 2017. We maintain a LT bearish view on the euro.

Eurozone

- The headline Economic confidence index improved to 107.8 index points from 106.8, on the back widespread gains in all sub-indices. Despite improvements across the board, consumer and construction confidence indices remain in negative territory. These were offset by the higher weighted industrial and service confidence components to push the headline index to its highest since 2011.
- Retail sales weakened over November coming off a high base in October. Major sub sectors declined with the exception of auto fuel and special stores. Over the year, gains remain slightly above trend growth and widespread across most countries in the region.

Synopsis: Generalised improvement suggests that while monetary stimulus will remain accommodative, that new stimulus will not be considered unless the outlook deteriorates. Current data points to a good Q4. As per above, our view is that geopolitical risks in Europe remain the main flashpoint in the near term. Monetary policy will likely remain accommodative through 2017. We maintain a LT bearish view on the euro.

China

- Chinese foreign reserves fell further in December, to $3.01 trillion, from $3.052 trillion in November, in line with expectations. The recent decline indicates a 9.6% y/y decline and a 1.3% m/m slump, marginally lower than the 11.2% and 2.2% contractions respectively, previously. Gold, FX, SDR and other reserve holdings declined over the month and on an annualised basis.

Synopsis: China has been reducing its gold and FX reserves (mostly dollar denominated) over the past year in order to defend the yuan from further weakness. The PBOC is unlikely to change its policy, however rising inflation and marginally better economic growth may provide some breathing room for policy normalisation over the medium to longer term. For now, loose monetary policy will likely persist.
