- On Friday the market opened with the rand trading around the 12.0400 level, another quiet session which saw the local unit confined between 12.0150 and 12.0900 on the day, closing the day toward the top end of the range.
- Since the time of the local close, there have been missile strikes by coalition forces on Syria, despite this the rand continues to trade at 12.0850 currently, EURUZAR is trading at 14.8980 and GBPZAR at 17.2270.
- On the international front, EURUSD had a similarly subdued trading session, holding between 1.2310 and 1.2345 on Friday, this morning also trading basically unchanged from the closing levels last week at 1.2330.
- Despite the aforementioned scenario, gold has thus far failed to react, and as a result it currently trades at 1345.00.
- International data today, from Europe we have April economic surveys, from the U.S we have Empire manufacturing, retail sales, business inventories, NAHB housing market index, the FED's Bostic is scheduled to speak.
- Over the most recent sessions, the rand has thus far held steady, relatively outperforming its emerging markets peers, which is marginally surprising given the aforementioned events.
- Possible trading range in the rand today 11.9500 to 12.2500

US

- The University of Michigan consumer confidence eased to 97.8 points in April, from 101.4 previously, worse than consensus of 100.5.
- Sentiment of current conditions and expectations of the future both deteriorated. Inflation expectations were marginally lower.
- Concerns over the impact of the trade wars that began last month, hampered confidence levels in April. However the indicator remains elevated, and likely to support overall consumer activity in the US for the rest of this year.

Synopsis: In this type of environment, and assuming the very robust pace of growth persists over the medium term, the Fed is expected to hike interest rates two more times this year, with some policymakers indicating that the pace of hikes may be revised if greater inflationary pressures are seen. For now, because the core PCE rate is below the Fed's 2% target, we anticipate a moderate pace of tightening over the medium term.

Europe

- The Eurozone trade surplus widened to €21 billion in February, from €20.2 billion in January, better than consensus for no change. The German trade surplus narrowed due to a decline in exports. However this was offset by narrower deficit in Spain and the Netherlands.
- Eurozone trade activity is solely dependent on global demand holding up, particularly for German manufactured products. Should we see a slowdown in global growth, a resurgence of trade wars, or a deceleration in global trade activity, this will hamper Eurozone exports over the medium term.

Synopsis: The ECB recently sounded more upbeat about Eurozone growth, however this hasn't translated into a sustainable rise in inflation, thereby keeping the ECB cautious. The ECB continues to reiterate that even though the asset purchase programme will be halved this year, and possibly come to an end soon, its holdings and reinvestments will be supportive of financial conditions and the economy over the medium term.
