- The local session got underway with the rand trading in the low 15.90s. USD sellers again held sway in the early session, and this saw the local unit reach a best level of 15.7700 on the day; however, this move was short-lived, with headlines indicating further load shedding leading the rand to trade back through the 16.000 level going into the time of the local close in a limited-liquidity environment, closing the session at 16.0875. This morning, the rand is currently straddling the 16.0000 handle, the EURZAR is trading at 18.1440 and the GBPZAR is trading at 20.6880.
- The international markets retreated from recent highs yesterday, with the EURUSD trading from a high of 1.1450 to 1.1333; this morning, it is trading at the bottom end of that range. The GBPUSD currently trades at 1.2925, 100 points off from the same time yesterday. Gold is currently trading at 1,663.50, some USD13 firmer on the day.
- Data releases scheduled for today: locally, we have BER consumer confidence; no releases from Europe; from the UK, we have GDP, industrial production, UK manufacturing and trade; and from the US, we have CPI, average hourly and weekly earnings and monthly budget releases.
- Although a degree of calm has returned to the world's financial markets, there are various factors that could change this instantly. Locally, the rand remains exceptionally vulnerable, as was suggested earlier in the week; any strength has been limited and moves to the topside have been more extreme, exacerbated by the persistent woeful performance of the electricity utility.
- Possible trading range for the rand today: 15.7500 to 16.1500

- Oil prices climbed for a second day lifted by hopes that U.S. producers will cut output, but gains were limited compared with Monday's crash after Saudi Arabia and Russia triggered a price war.
- Gold climbed as investors weighed the recent volatility in stock markets driven by the oil price war and concerns over the impact of the coronavirus on global growth. Base metal prices extended a rebound from the lowest in more than three years as crude oil rallied and markets await details from the Trump administration on planned stimulus measures to counter the coronavirus impact.
