- Yesterday, the local session opened with the rand trading around the 17.1000 level. Price action was initially cautious, but once the rand gained momentum and breached the 17.0000 level, it did trade to a best level of 16.8900 on the day, ending the session close to those lows. In the overnight session, the local unit traded marginally weaker, although it has thus far continued to hold below 17.0000, currently trading at 16.9600. The EURZAR is trading at 19.0315 and the GBPZAR is trading at 21.2820.
- The international markets have seen the major currency pairs hold steady over the most recent sessions. The EURUSD traded around the 1.1200 level; this morning, it is currently trading at 1.1218, after posting steady gains in the most recent sessions. The GBPUSD has traded back sub the 1.2600 level, this morning currently trading at 1.2542.
- Gold continued to drift lower as global risk appetite improved, yesterday shedding some USD22 over the course of the session; this morning, it currently trades at 1,703.85.
- Data releases scheduled for today: locally, we have electricity production and consumption; from Europe, we have retail sales for the zone; and from the US, we have jobless claims and trade balance releases.
- The rand has continued to post gains over the most recent sessions, having extended these to a recent best level of 16.8900; crucially, it has thus far consolidated these gains to hold steady sub the 17.0000 level. There will be much focus on the US NFP data tomorrow, but the technical indicators for the local unit suggest the potential for additional gains.
- Possible trading range for the rand today: 16.7000 to 17.2000

- Oil prices lower, reversing gains in the previous session, on concerns that supply will rise if major producers are unable to agree to extend the depth of output cuts that have supported recent gains.
- Gold steadied after falling the most in more than a month on lingering political tensions, base metals mixed.
