- The final session of the week saw the rand open the session trading around the 14,2000 level. Initially, the local unit posted steady gains to reach a best level of 14,0600 on the day; thereafter, going into the close of the week, it relinquished some of its early gains to end the local session at 14,1500. Activity in the overnight sessions was muted; the rand is trading marginally weaker, currently trading at 14,2050; the EURZAR is trading at 16,7725 and the GBPZAR is currently at 19,6605.
- On the international front, the major currency pairs continued occupying limited trading ranges. The EURUSD this morning is currently at 1,1805, which is marginally off from the same time on Friday. The GBPUSD is currently trading at 1,3835, marginally off from the close of 1,3856 last week. Gold has continued trading around the 1 800,00 level for some time now; this morning, it currently trades at 1 792,25.
- There are no meaningful data releases scheduled for today.
- The foreign exchange markets have over the course of the most recent sessions continued trading within limited ranges. The rand, having posted steady gains over the course of the month thus far, opened above 14,5000 on Friday, reaching very close to the 14,0000 handle. However, the local unit has thus far failed to consolidate those recent gains.
- Possible trading range for the rand today: 14,0000 to 14,4000

UK/Europe

- European stocks retreated, erasing earlier advance, as investors considered risks to earnings and economic growth against the prospect of policymakers maintaining support for the recovery. The Stoxx 600 Europe Index retreated 0,3% by 3:59 p.m. in London, with telecoms and utilities underperforming, while miners and technology led the gainers. Stocks extended declines after the news that the Biden administration is said to be weighing a new investigation into Chinese subsidies and their damage to the US economy as a way to pressure Beijing on trade. This could mean another phase of US-China tensions, which could weigh on global growth sentiment. The main European equities benchmark is on track for a second weekly loss, the first time since the end of April, as investors reduced their risk allocations amid fears that central bank stimulus measures might get pulled back quickly. Market participants are also closely watching inflation data, as prices paid to US producers increased in August by more than forecast, adding to fears about rising costs eating into earnings growth.

USA

- US equities headed for the biggest weekly decline since mid-June in volatile trading as investors assessed the latest read on the economy after more strategists weighed in with cautious comments on the market. The S&P 500 was down 0,5% after erasing a 0,6% gain on Friday. The benchmark gauge was on track for a 1,4% loss for the holiday-shortened week. Apple Inc. was the biggest decliner in the Dow Jones Industrial Average after a court ordered the iPhone maker to make a change to the way it generates money from its App Store. Gold headed for its first weekly decline since early August after data on US producer prices rekindled debate over when the Federal Reserve will pull back on stimulus. Strategists from almost all the top Wall Street banks have come out this week with a nervous message about the US stock market. The common themes in their analyses include valuations at historical extremes, a near-non-stop rally for seven months, an economy that looks soft and the imminent tapering of Fed stimulus. Apple dropped more than 3%, the most since mid-July. A federal judge said Friday that the company must let app developers steer consumers to outside payment methods.

Asia

- Stocks fell Monday as the risk of a slower recovery from the pandemic shadowed global markets and Chinese technology stocks buckled under the weight of Beijing's regulatory clampdown. A Hong Kong gauge of Chinese tech names tumbled after a report that officials are seeking to break up Ant Group Co.'s Alipay. China's online platforms have also been told to protect the rights of workers in the so-called gig economy. China's overall stock market fluctuated, while Japan slipped.
