- The new week got underway with the rand trading at around the 14,6700 level. The local unit initially encountered sustained demand for the USD at the opening levels. This saw the rand trade to a high of 14,8000 during the local session, thereafter, recovering from its early losses to end the day trading at 14,6825. In the overnight session, the rand recovered to currently trade at 14,6250. The EURZAR is currently trading at 17,0315 and the GBPZAR at 20,1385.
- The international markets saw the major currency pairs trade marginally firmer against the USD, although the gains were relatively limited. The EURUSD opened at 1,1580 yesterday and is currently trading at 1,1648 this morning. The GBPUSD is currently trading at 1,3772, marginally above the highs posted yesterday. Gold is currently trading at 1 774,15 this morning, which is marginally firmer than the same time yesterday.
- Data releases scheduled for today: locally, there are no releases; from Europe, we have construction output for the zone; and from the US, we have housing starts and building permits and various ECB and FED members are scheduled to speak.
- The opening levels in the rand at around the 14,6700 level proved attractive to buyers of USD initially. However, this demand was not sustained, and by the time of the local close, the rand had recovered the day's losses to end the session unchanged.
- Possible trading range for the rand today: 14,4500 to 14,8500

Equities

Cash equities | +2711 535 4030/31

South Africa

- Top40 -0,4%; it was a relatively quiet start to the week with overall trade focussed on only a handful of names. Inflation concerns remain the focal point, especially with energy prices where they were trading. Resources took a bit of a breather and drifted lower post last week's sharp rally. Banks (+0,8%) snapped a three-day losing streak, led higher by NED (+2,3%) and INP (+1,6%). Both retailers and industrials ended only slightly lower. On the news front, a trading update from DCP (+0,5%) read bang in line with FY estimates.

UK/Europe

- European stocks retreated after their best weekly gain since March, with luxury goods shares under pressure after China signalled plans for property tax legislation and economic data disappointed. The Stoxx 600 slid 0,5% by the close in London, as luxury stocks, such as LVMH and Kering SA, echoed their drop in August, which was driven by nervousness over China's intent to reduce its wealth disparity. The mood was also subdued by data showing economic growth slowed in the country, fuelling fears about further setbacks in the recovery. All European equity sectors traded lower, with automakers and travel falling the most.

USA

- The S&P rose for a fourth session, building on its best week since July, as inflation worries eased with crude oil fading from its multi-year highs. The benchmark, which is at its highest level in more than a month, rose 0,3%. Of the 11 major industry groups, 7 rose, with consumer discretionary and tech leading to the upside, while utilities and healthcare were the worst performers. The tech-heavy Nasdaq rose by 1%, trading at its highest level in more than three weeks. Meanwhile, the blue-chip Dow fell by 0,1%. Inflation concerns waned as oil retreated from the multi-year highs it hit earlier in the session. US industrial data showed signs of weakness on Monday, which weighed on energy prices, helping offset an ongoing shortage of natural gas that has been pushing prices higher.

Asia

- Asian equities advanced, supported by a rebound in technology shares listed in Hong Kong and elsewhere in the region amid better-than-expected earnings and lower valuations. The MSCI Asia Pacific Index climbed 0,7%, as TSMC and Alibaba provided some of the biggest boosts. The Hang Seng Tech Index rose to its highest since 17 September, as Chinese authorities are said to be considering opening up access for content on Tencent and ByteDance platforms to search engines, such as Baidu.
